A tentative program beginning at 2 p.m. has been drawn up which allows the student and his or her parents to each attend two informative sessions. Besides the distribution of brochures and the question and answer sessions, there will be a coffee hour sponsored by the Parents Guild.

When asked by reported Lyal Holmberg what he thought about the coming college day Superintendent of Catholic Schools, and administrator of Bishop Armstrong Father James Poole re-

"We feel privileged to have representatives from Catholic Colleges of the West Coast as visitors to Bishop Armstrong. We know that their presence will encourage many young men and women to enroll in these Catholic schools of higher education. We wish to thank them for taking the time for counsel to point out the importance of Catholic education."

"Small World" Story

An interesting anecdote about the college day is that it will be a reunion of two old friends: Mrs. Claire Wallace, Armstrong faculty

The Boys' Choral Group of Armstrong is now learning songs which they hope to be able to sing before the student body at a later date. These songs include numbers such as: "Beautiful Mornin'," "It's a Grand Night for Singing," and NEW Falcon Fight Song, and "Jolly Roger." The group is also learning to sing the Mass according to the new plan of the Holy Father.

The boys in choral are: Jesse Aguayo, Anthony Arjil, Gerald Bakarich, Gene Bastian, Michael Basurto, Thomas Biesheuval, Dennis Bloom, Vincent Chargin, Merrill Clementson, Jerry Coffey,

Just Think About It

By Jo Ann Anglin

Most of you have pretty well decided by now which college you wish to attend. Some have already made plans to go away to school while many will attend one of the local junior or four-year colleges. And there are some who aren't even sure yet whether they will go to col-

Whether decided or not, you would probably find it a great help to attend the special program which will be given at Bishop Armstrong on Sunday, March 8. There will be faculty representatives from West Coast Catholic colleges such as Portland, U.S.F., Marymount and Holy Name to mention a few. They will discuss tuition, programs, credits, degrees, and many other subjects pertinent to college.

Every student should make an effort to attend these talks, especially in view of all the time and trouble these people have taken to come here—even from as far away as Seattle and Gonzaga in Washington.

But most of all-bring your parents. Who knows; maybe this will help you to decide which college you should attend and even chart the course of your future. And just think, you can only gain. You have nothing to lose.

Correspondence

Editor: I am a senior this year (I have been for the past three years). Most people seem to try to avoid me. I was wondering if you could think of a reason why people are not attracted to me. I will sure appreciate your help.

(Name withheld)

Editor's Comment: The editorial staff is at a loss to help this student. Perhaps some reader can be of assistance?

Editor: I have written this letter to you for the sole purpose of finding a boy to take me to the Senior Ball (my first date). I hope that you will publish this letter in your paper and that some nice boy will see it and offer to take me to the dance.

Desperate Dunize

Editor's Comment: Reader Desperate Dunize has our deepest sympathy but she should know that advertising in Talon costs $1.25 per column inch. Engravings are extra.

Editor: I have an unusual habit of doing homework. None of my fellow students ever seem to do any. Do you think that I have formed a bad habit?

Study-Hard

Editor's Comment: This unusual habit, although very rare, can frequently be developed into something useful.

The memory of a genius is usually easier to live with than the genius himself, especially if the genius is Alec Guinness, who lives to paint, and will live in your flat if you let him get a foot in the door. Alec will even paint the door if it is big enough and white enough. Anytime Guinness is not in jail or trying to repair his leaky houseboat, he's on the phone badgering millionaire Ernest Thesiger for money. You see, Thesiger, with the help of Alec's ex-wife, has come into possession of all of his works of art. One lucky day Alec is admitted to the elegant flat of Lord and Lady Beeder who dabble in art. Their interest in him soon turns to panic at his hilarious behavior. They make the mistake of taking a six-week holiday and leaving an empty white wall behind them. In no time at all, their priceless furniture and art works have been pawned to pay for oil paints, and the wall becomes a giant mural, covered with brilliantly colored feet! When they come home, Lord and Lady Beeder fall through the floor (literally). With the timely death of millionaire Thesiger,
