TO THE GRADUATES OF JUNE

The same fair June with its roses red,
The same wise words to the young hearts said;
The same deep sea and the same blue sky,
The same fair hopes and the promise high;
The same pure eyes, the same soft hands,
The sunlit hair with its golden strands.

The same glad song with its echoes clear,
The same low whisper of friendships dear;
The same farewell and the passing shades
Like sun half hidden in woodland glades;
The same soft tears for divided ways,
The same fond vows for the coming days.

The same frail barque on the shoreless sea,
The same mute fear of the Is-to-be,
God keep you fair as the flowers you hold,
White as the lilies with hearts of gold;
God keep you pure as the prayer of a nun,
God guide you and bless you, every one!
