BROTHERS COLLEGE 18; STANFORD 0.

The Twelfth Street boys started out for the championship with a jump by beating Stanford Junior High 18-0. The game began with pep and both teams were fighting hard. Stanford tried to pull the Harkness trick of slipping around the ends on the criss-cross, but before they could do so, Steve O'Neil, a new end, did some good defensive work by slipping around his end and breaking up their plays with some neat tackles.

Their next offensive was against the line, but it was holding like a stone wall. During the whole contest the College boys had the ball around Stanford's line, but still could not slip over in the first half, and when the shot rang out the score was 0-0. In the second half the Stanford boys began to weaken against the unending assaults of the College eleven. Soon Hill was given the ball and interference was formed close around him. Down the turf they went till "Hilly" was left alone to down a couple of men and carry the pigskin across the line for our first touchdown.

A minute later we scored another, when Doyle threw a forward pass to O'Neil, who ran across the line with the ball. Again the College eleven worked up close to the line and Doyle slipped around the end for our third touchdown. When he was converting, the gun banged that the Christian Brothers College boys were victors.

After the Stanford game we got down to hard training to overcome the handicap Harkness had on us the first game. With our new suits, headgears and shoulder-pads, which Brother Albion procured, we looked like a real football team for the first time. A day before the big game, some of the men were changed in their positions. "Red" Rouke was put in center, O'Brien shifted to left end and Lagomarsino changed from the line to right halfback.

HARKNESS 12; COLLEGE 12.

We were first to receive the ball, and started down the field, gaining ground at every down. Mitchell called for the ball and tried Lagomarsino, who grabbed it and dove for our opponents' line. Right through the whole bunch he went, leaving them sprawling all over.

"Largy" repeated this and went over the line, giving us six points. By this time they were saying that the "Beef Trust" had been imported from St. Mary's College. Harkness made their first touchdown on a trick forward to Silva, who went through a clear field of twenty-five yards. Harkness tried their assaults on our ends, but could not work their trick plays so easily this game, because the College boys were on the alert from the lessons of the last two games.

The first half ended six to six. In the first part of the second, the College eleven was in the center of the field when Mitchell got the ball and made a dive for the left end. As he was about to be tackled he passed it back to Doyle, who under the same circumstance threw to Hill, who passed around the end and crossed the line for a touchdown. The Harkness boys evened up the score on a play which was much disputed, since the College boys claimed they should have had the ball. When the game was resumed Lagomarsino kept ploughing through and was about over the line when the game ended.

Both managers tried to arrange another game, but the Christmas vacation intervened and most of the boys were working. When the holidays were over it was too late for football, so the championship remains in dispute. In the last game Fred Tavares hurt his collarbone, but kept on playing, not letting anyone know he was hurt, so anxious was he to win the game. That is the way with Fred, he does a whole lot and has little to say.

Lastly, following a theatre party and banquet given the squad by Brother Albion, Lagomarsino and Doyle were elected captain and manager respectively, for the next season.
