THE THREE R'S . . . Reading, 'riting . . . now rubble. The Christian Brothers school at 21st and Broadway is quickly being reduced to rubble under the onslaught of the wrecker's iron ball. The famed education plant, built in 1924, will be replaced by the St. Joseph's Girls High School.

Memories Amidst The Rubble

"Never more, never more," is the reaction of nostalgic alumni of Christian Brothers High School as they watch the leveling of the deserted buildings at 21st and Broadway. On the planning boards for the site is a proposed girls' high school, fruit of a future Development Fund Campaign. The Christian Brothers now conduct Bishop Armstrong High. Sirlin Photo

END OF ERA—A landmark which has been standing at 21st Street and Broadway for the past 41 years fell under the “headache ball” of a construction crew today. The bell tower of the Christian Brothers School was brought down to clear the area for the construction of a new Roman Catholic girls high school. Bee Photo by George Roberts
